Reason:

Mr. K. Parmeshwar, learned senior counsel appearing for the appellant, submits that although the demand drafts were prepared pursuant to order dated 21.03.2025 in the month of April and May, 2025, but the same could not be deposited as the time granted for the purpose had expired. He further submits that an appropriate application seeking extension of time was moved, which could not be taken up and consequently, no orders could be passed.

He further submits that the appellant shall, by 01.12.2026 (Tuesday), come prepared with a demand draft drawn in favour of the respondent for the entire awarded amount, calculated at the rate of 9% interest till 30.11.2026.

Learned counsel appearing for the respondent submits that there is no justification for reducing the rate of interest and the appellant should pay the entire awarded amount at the rate of 12% p.a. as directed by National Consumer Disputes Redressal Commission (NCDRC).

List the matter on 01.12.2026.

After the demand draft bearing the amount calculated at 9% p.a. is handed over to the respondent, the Court will consider whether or not to award further 3% interest.
