2. The case of the prosecution is that the defacto complainant had received a call from the phone number 90477 77775 from a person introducing himself as Thirunavukkarasu and had stated that he is running an opinion poll company called IPDS in Chennai. He had informed the defacto complainant that he had called for an important purpose and that he had contacted him upon the directions of persons from an important political party and he had asked if the defacto complainant could meet him in his house, for which the defacto complainant had replied by stating that he is busy and that the matter can be conveyed over phone itself. Further, the defacto complainant had disconnected the call as the caller had repeatedly insisted on meeting him personally. The caller kept repeatedly calling him through WhatsApp but the defacto complainant did not answer the same. Once again at about 10.20 p.m., when the said caller had called the defacto complainant through WhatsApp, the defacto complainant had answered the call and at that time, the said person had told him that he had come to that position in his career with great difficulty and that he has no idea as to how long the DMK Government will last and that if the defacto complainant does as he says, both will be benefitted. But the defacto complainant had informed that he has no interest in the said deal. Immediately, the caller had informed the defacto complainant that he would be provided with Rs.35

Crores and that he need not resign and the caller had further informed him that though it is his duty to vote as per the Whip's directions he should not do so and that it is enough if he acts as per their directions during the motion against the Speaker and for which he will be given Rs.35 Crores. It was further informed that if the defacto complainant agrees to the said deal, then on behalf of the party, one Naresh, Krishnan and one Ashok Kumar who are aware of all the dealings will meet him and take care of everything. The defacto complainant had informed the caller that he is not interested in the said deal and asked him not to speak to him any further. But, the said caller kept repeating the same thing and the defacto complainant asked him not to talk to him again. Immediately, the caller had told the defacto complainant that it is good for him and his family only if he acts as per his directions and had threatened the defacto complainant that he will face dire consequences otherwise and the said person also had threatened the defacto complainant that he should not reveal to anyone about the conversation and if he does so, then him and his family members will not be alive. The above stated allegations amounts to destabilisation of the elected Government and amounts to offences against a public servant. Hence the defacto complainant lodged a complaint.
