CENTRAL BANKS' UMBRELLA GROUP'S REPORT WARNS OF FISCAL STRAIN, SUPPLY SHOCKS

BIS says public debt, AI boom and fragilities raise global risks

REUTERS
London, June 28

GLOBAL PRESSURES INTENSIFY

- Debt, inflation, AI risks rise
- Inflation fears persist despite Iran ceasefire
- Record debt heightens sovereign-financial stability risks

GLOBAL PRESSURES FROM rising public debt to financial fragilities and the sustainability of the AI boom are increasing risks, underscoring the need for disciplined policymaking, according to the Bank for International Settlements (BIS). The central banks' umbrella group's annual economic report published on Sunday warned of a complex mix of vulnerabilities, including strained fiscal positions, lingering supply shocks and the risk of a renewed bout of stubbornly high inflation. While economic activity has remained resilient in recent months, policymakers must act decisively, the BIS said, to preserve stability.

"Policy actions must reinforce force each other to avoid a pull and push on the global economy. Ultimately, success depends on sound fiscal and financial foundations," BIS General Manager Pablo Hernandez de Cos said. The report highlighted four key pressure points. Inflation has picked up again, with the BIS cautioning that more frequent supply disruptions could cause higher inflation expectations to become entrenched among households and businesses.

"The readiness to act if the central banks observe that there is the anchoring of inflation expectations is the main message that we want to set," de Cos said. The recent ceasefire between the US and Iran in West Asia and the reopening of the Strait of Hormuz was "good news" that meant extreme scenarios would be avoided, although it was likely to take time for the oil market to "normalise", he added. The BIS also flagged uncertainty over the durability of the current surge in investment tied to artificial intelligence. While AI has boosted confidence and supported growth through expectations of productivity gains, the bank warned it was raising fears about jobs and that supply bottlenecks and competition could lead to the kind of overinvestment seen in last boom-and-bust cycles. For central banks, it was posing fundamental questions about how the economy is likely to function, although de Cos said that for now it would be "unwise" to be prescriptive about how they should react. Elevated asset valuations and signs of investor complacency have left core bond markets more fragile, while the financing of the AI boom also looks reliant on debt and complex funding structures across the supply chain. At the same time, record-high public debt and sovereign debt markets dominated by large, hedge funds had created "a new sovereign-financial stability nexus," which poses growing risks.

European heatwave: France reports 1,000 excess deaths

FRANCE RECORDED ABOUT 1,000 excess deaths this week because of an "exceptional" heat wave that's continuing to scorch Europe.

Record temperatures pushed daily deaths above 1,400 on Thursday and Friday, from 900 to 1,000 per day in April and May, Santé Publique France said in a statement on Sunday. The figures are likely to be revised higher because they're based on digital certificates, which typically account for about 60% of fatalities nationwide, the public health authority said. Of the deaths recorded since Wednesday, 85% were people aged 65 or higher, it

Temperatures were forecast to near or top 40 degree celsius in Germany, Poland & Italy, while storms broke out in parts of France and energy production. It's receding in France and sweeping east, with searing temperatures in countries including Germany and Italy. —BLOOMBERG

Saudi Aramco chopper crash kills 14

A HELICOPTER OPERATED by Saudi Aramco crashed Sunday in the energy heartland of Ras Tanura, killing all 14 passengers on board. The crash took place at 6 a.m. local time, the Saudi Press Agency said, citing the energy ministry. It did not elaborate on the cause of the crash or the identities of the victims beyond the fact they were all Saudi nationals. Relevant authorities are investigating, it said.

Ras Tanura in Saudi Arabia's Persian Gulf coast is at the center of the kingdom's energy industry, hosting the country's biggest refinery and critical oil export infrastructure. Aramco had only just days earlier resumed loading crude at the terminals in the area for shipments through the Strait of Hormuz, after keeping the facilities shut since the Iran war started at the end of February. It wasn't immediately clear if the incident on Sunday affected any energy facilities. Any disruption would deal a fresh blow to Saudi Arabia's efforts to return its operations to normal levels following an interim peace deal between the US and Iran. —BLOOMBERG

Driest June since 2009: Monsoon deficit hits 43%

GUJARAT (-80%), CHHATTISGARH (-67%), Jharkhand (-67%), Maharashtra (-58%), Uttar Pradesh (-56%) Odisha (-54%), Karnataka (-42%) and Madhya Pradesh (-39%) have received hugely 'deficient' rainfall. Only a few states — Rajasthan, West Bengal and Andhra Pradesh — have received rainfall in the normal range this month so far. "The monsoon is expected to strengthen until around July 5 as favourable large-scale weather patterns help it advance across more of central India," Akshay Deoras, Senior Research Scientist at the Department of Meteorology, University of Reading, UK, told FE. Deoras said current forecast suggest the monsoon may weaken around the middle of July, raising the possibility that the second half of the month will be drier than the first half across much of the country. Rains in July and August are crucial for boosting kharif and horticultural crops sowing as around 60% of monsoon rains occur during these two months. According to IMD forecast on Sunday "conditions are favourable for further advance of southwest monsoon into some more parts of Gujarat, Madhya Pradesh, Chhattisgarh, Jharkhand, Bihar, Uttar Pradesh and Uttarakhand during next 2-3 days". Last month, the met office had lowered its forecast of "below-normal" southwest monsoon rainfall for June-September this year to 90% of the benchmark implying that the coming monsoon could be the weakest since 2015. The met department has noted that El Nino conditions are present over the equatorial Pacific ocean and are expected to strengthen further during the monsoon season. A delayed monsoon could adversely impact kharif crop sowing, with 315 out of 724 districts possibly receiving deficient rains this season, Agriculture Minister Shivraj Singh Chouhan said earlier this week. The centre has identified 111 districts as most vulnerable because they have less than 25% irrigation coverage. Sowing activities have just commenced a week back after monsoon progress revived by June 20 after a break of about two weeks. Experts have stated that the delayed progression of the monsoon across western and central India is likely to postpone kharif sowing and transplantation, particularly for paddy, cotton, pulses and key horticultural crops such as onion and tomato. Around 10% of the total kharif area has been covered by crops including rice, pulses, oilseeds, sugarcane and cotton. The total acreage of all kharif crops remains higher at 11.79 million hectares as of June 22.

quately capture. For the brands it tracks, Trucommerce says AI assistants now account for around 10% of organic traffic, while AI referral traffic has grown 400-700% over the past year. The influence, however, stretches well beyond the clicks that brands can measure. Many consumers begin their product research on ChatGPT before completing purchases on marketplaces such as Amazon, Myntra or Blinkit, making AI's role in buying decisions significantly larger than visible referral traffic suggests. Chhaparia cited ITC MasterChef as an example, saying the frozen foods brand moved into the top three recommendations across ChatGPT, Gemini and Perplexity within two months of adopting the company's platform. For startups building this new layer, the opportunity extends beyond marketing. "AI is shaping up to be one of the best user acquisition channels, better than paid ads, with paid ads, the day you cut spends, your sales drop. AI traffic is organic," Tushar K, founder of Rankly, said. As AI assistants increasingly become the gateway through which consumers discover products, brands may soon have to optimise not just for search engines, but for conversations. Just as SEO became indispensable in the Google era, generative engine optimisation is shaping up to become an essential discipline in the AI economy.

Banks feel the pinch amid FCNR push

"DOMESTIC DEPOSIT RATES will act as a ceiling. Banks will also have to assess how effectively they can deploy these foreign currency funds into the domestic credit market through rupee lending," said a banker at a state-run lender. To attract those deposits, Indian banks have already moved aggressively, raising FCNR(B) rates by 200-300 basis points to a range of 5.25-7.13% for maturities of three to five years. The RBI has provided additional tailwind by agreeing to bear the entire hedging cost on fresh FCNR(B) deposits mobilised between June 8 and September 30 — a concession that makes dollar deposits substantially more attractive and removes a significant cost burden from banks. With lending spreads narrowing as deposit rates rise, the business is increasingly a volume game. Margins are thin; the money is in scale. Even banks with existing overseas operations are now looking to supplement their own resources by borrowing from foreign lenders, using those lines to mobilise larger FCNR(B) deposit books. While no regulatory cap exists on leverage against such deposits, bankers expect the standard multiple to settle at around nine times the deposit amount. That scale opportunity has drawn in international players. Standard Chartered, HSBC and other foreign banks have begun discussions with Indian lenders about collaboration. "Indian banks are seeking large funding lines. These can be deployed either for ECBs to public sector undertakings or for leverage against FCNR(B) deposits," said the chief executive of a large foreign bank. Early depositor behaviour is also revealing a pattern: customers appear to prefer three-year tenures over five-year products, unwilling to lock in funds for longer periods in an environment where interest rate expectations remain fluid. The final contours of the market are still being negotiated. Interest rates on both deposits and leveraged loans continue to evolve, and bankers say the structure is not yet set. "We are reviewing the rates offered by foreign banks and negotiating with them. The final structure is likely to be in place, with fund flows commencing by the middle of next month," said a senior bank official. The broad expectation is that meaningful inflows will begin gathering pace by mid-July. "There is money to be made as long as deposit mobilisation remains strong and the interest rate arbitrage is preserved," said a private bank executive—a formulation that captures both the opportunity and its essential fragility.

Brands race to crack the AI discovery code

INDIAN CONSUMER BRANDS are beginning to see a similar trend emerge and are moving early in the hope of securing an advantage before AI-led shopping becomes mainstream. "Brands spent years learning how to show up on Google. Nobody taught them how to show up on AI. And that's exactly where they are stuck," Brijesh Damodaran Nair, managing partner at Auxano Capital, which closely tracks developments in artificial intelligence, told FE. "If you ask your SEO agency today to help you show up when someone asks AI for a product recommendation, they won't know what to tell you. This is genuinely new ground for the old vendors." That gap is giving rise to startups such as Trucommerce, Rankly, Prava, Rye and Firmly, which specialise in what the industry is beginning to call generative engine optimisation, or GEO. Their role is less about gaming algorithms and more about helping brands understand whether AI assistants recommend them at all, why competitors are being suggested instead, how their products are being described and how much traffic AI platforms are sending their way. Venture investors have started tracking the emerging category as a potential new commerce infrastructure layer, with firms in both India and the US evaluating startups operating in the space. For brands, the concern extends beyond visibility.

"Brands don't know who they are losing to; a competitor can be the default recommendation in their category and they would have no idea," said Umang Chhaparia, co-founder of Trucommerce AI, whose clients include ITC's Savlon and MasterChef, Puma, Ajo and Amazon. "They also have less control over how AI describes them because it may be pulling information from reviews and third-party lists instead of the brand's own messaging." Industry executives say brands are spending anywhere between ₹15-60 lakh on six-month engagements to solve that problem, with many renewing contracts after seeing measurable results. Besides helping brands rewrite product information in formats AI systems can better understand, these firms also track AI referral traffic and monitor where recommendations originate, something conventional web analytics tools do not adequately capture.
